This good, old, true maxim appeals with peculiar-force to an honest, industrious people, who have left the embarrassment of old associatious, to find a happy home in this region of beautiful sunshine, pure health and bountiful harvests. A home here is indeed worthy the laborer's toil and secured with small means by well-directed industry and fragality. It is not the two-pence nor the three-pence carned; but the one penny saved—that makes sure this glorious inheritance. Of what we herein propose to speak, we do know full well, qualified by years of industrious experience in the most acute scathing cauldron of castern commercial strife, we have felt competent to appreciate the requirements of an intelligent people who, coming to this beautiful land, burning the bridge behind them, have grasped their own destiny—planted here their own figure oand here will can its fruits and repose in its shadows.

Confiding in the wisdom products and sealed and a shadows.

shadows.
Confiding in the wisdom, prudence and energy of such a people, we have constructed, at large expense, a store-room so vast and complete in elegance and appointment, as to have been termed by some of small and narrow faith. 'a wild chimera.' Its appointments are specific—its purposes, a common good—devoted to a fair and equitable dry goods business, founded on the modern principle of square dealings and just values.

To this end—with extmordinary care, under the most favored circumstances, we have purchased from the largest and best jobbling houses of the world, as well as of the best and most approved manufacturers of the country, an athmalant stock of the most destrable makes and fabrics, of staple and fancy goods, embracing the new shades and tints in dress goods, running into every department of stock, with all the new and interesting novelties of the season, for each and every dejustment, consistent, in our judgment, with the wants and requirements of our people.
